Widow of Thyssen, Steel Man Who Helped Hitler To Power, Headed Empire Since 1951

Amelia Sur Helle Thyssen, the widow of one of Hitler's earliest supporters and reputedly one of the world's richest women, died in her Bavarian castle. She was 87 years old.

Mrs. Thyssen, erect and elegant even in her later years, kept a firm hand on the mighty Thyssen coal and steel empire she inherited from her husband, Fritz, in 1951, says the New York Times.

The worth of her industrial holdings, which she shared with her daughter, Anita Graefin de Zichy Thyssen, of Buenos Aires, has been estimated at $1 billion.

Her husband, once Germany's richest industrialist, inherited a steel empire from his father, August Thyssen, considered the creator of the German iron industry.

Fritz Thyssen held 15 per cent of the total capital of Vereingte Stahlwerke, a trust that ruled more than 75 per cent of Germany's ore reserve, employing 200,000 workers and spread over an area of 52 square miles. After the war, the Allies broke up the combine into 17 independent companies.

More than any other industrialist, Mr. Thyssen was credited with aiding Hitler's rise to power. Later, he turned on the Nazis, fled Germany, and denounced Nazism in "I Paid Hitler."

At the time of his defection in 1939, his property was valued at $88 million. It was confiscated by the Germans.

In 1941, while trying to make his way to South America he was picked up by the Vichy Government and turned over to German authorities. He was sent to Dachau, where his wife joined him voluntarily. She was at various times in Buchenwald and Oranienburg concentration camps, too.

In 1948, Mr. Thyssen was found guilty as a "minor Nazi" by a German denazification court, and ordered to turn over fifteen per cent of his property to Germany to a restitution fund for the victims of Nazi persecution.

Embittered, he moved with his wife to join his daughter in Argentina. Mrs. Thyssen later returned to Germany but never reclaimed her German citizenship.

After assuming control of the company in 1951, Mrs. Thyssen visited the headquarters in Düsseldorf only once a year, preferring to remain secluded with her extensive collections of paintings and rare porcelain at her castle Puchhof in Lower Bavaria, says the New York Times. Her art collection, which had been confiscated by Hermann Göring despite the fact that the Nazi air marshal had been a frequent guest of the Thyssens, was returned to her after the war.

Mrs. Thyssen exercised her will on virtually all important company activities. She acted through trusted representatives including Dr. Kurt Birtenbach, the West German Member of Parliament and diplomatic trouble shooter.

It was Mrs. Thyssen herself who made the decision last year to merge her empire's chief steel company with another West German steel giant, Phoenix-Rheinrohr A. G.

The Thyssen concern is considered the third largest company in Germany, after Volkswagen and Krupp, and is the biggest steel producer in Western Europe.

The combined organization, with an annual capacity of 7.5 million tons, is larger than the Italian Government's Italside, which has a rate of five million tons. Mrs. Thyssen and her daughter controlled $56 million worth of shares of the combine's total basic capital of $190 million.

Together with her daughter, Mrs. Thyssen founded the Fritz Thyssen Foundation to help advance German science. Originally, twenty-five million in Thyssen money was put into the foundation and the amount has risen since. The foundation is the first one in Germany based on a family fortune.

For her role in sponsoring the foundation the West German Government awarded her the Federal Service Cross, the highest civilian medal. She was the first woman in Germany to be so honored, says the New York Times. Her daughter, with whom she reportedly was not on the best of terms in her later years, is Mrs. Thyssen's sole legal heir. Mrs. Thyssen was buried in the family vault in Landsberg Castle near Essen.

Case of German Who Asked Asylum In Egypt Began In Israel

Helmut Cramer, a former Waffen S.S. officer and a Bonn publisher, has disclosed in Cairo that he has asked the United Arab Republic for political asylum. He said that everything was going well with his application. He had fled from West Germany, in April, he said, reports the London Times, to avoid standing trial in May before a Cologne court on charges of endangering the Federal Republic by spreading Nazi thinking and working for the rehabilitation of the Waffen S.S.

The court proceedings were said to have arisen out of the publication by Cramer's publishing house of three books about the war. Two were written by Otto Skorzeny, the former Waffen S.S. colonel who rescued Mussolini from his Italian mountain stronghold in 1943. The third was written by Herr Werner Nixdorf, the political editor of the rightwing Nationale und Soldaten Zeitung.

In a press interview Cramer said that he was in possession of material incriminating some 100 senior German judges of Nazi crimes. This material, he said, had recently arrived with copies of the banned books. He would publish the material in about eight or nine months.

He also intended to publish recent writings of German journalists side by side with their articles written during Hitler's time. Informed sources in Cairo said that President Nasser had agreed to allow Cramer to publish the books in Egypt and had promised financial support and the cooperation of the United Arab Republic press and broadcasting services.

Cramer said that he was seeking asylum in the United Arab Republic because his case had originated in the action of an Israel student, who in January last year had torn down a placard advertising books on one of his mobile bookshops standing in a public square.

He and Nixdorf had been charged with causing a breach of the peace. In June last year the police had confiscated the books and the charge had been changed to one of propagating Nazism. No information had been released about the case, says the London Times, by the Cologne prosecutor's department until his flight in April.

Cramer asserted that over this period the trial had had to be postponed twice because of the withdrawal of judges on the ground of prejudice over Nazism. He had become convinced that he would not get a fair trial in Cologne, and so had laid plans to flee.

The two Skorzeny books were compulsory reading for Israel Army officers, he said. They had been translated into several languages without raising any charge, yet the possession of them in Germany was apparently now a crime.

Cramer has been in Cairo with his wife and two young sons since May 16. He said he had originally intended to stay in Madrid but, acting on advice of friends, he had applied for asylum in the United Arab Republic.

His reason for his crusade against the authorities was based on the conviction that "the democratic principle is not being observed in present-day Germany. The banning of books in today's Germany amounts to the same as the burning of books under Hitler."

It was confirmed in Bonn that Cramer was put on trial last November on a charge of issuing publications on the "exploits" of the Waffen S.S.; it was alleged that these harmed German youth and praised Nazism. The hearings before a Cologne court were later adjourned until May, says the London Times, but the authorities announced in April that Cramer was missing and had presumably left the country.

Jewish Criticism Over The Attempt Of Soviets At U.N. To Equate Zionism With Anti-Semitism And Nazism Is Sharp And Precise

When the Soviet Union called on the United Nations to condemn Zionism as well as Nazism, and neo-Nazism, the proposal came in the form of an amendment to an amendment sponsored by the United States and Brazil to a multi-national agreement on the Elimination of all Forms of Racial Discrimination, says the New York Herald Tribune. This amendment urged member states "to condemn anti-Semitism" and to "work for "its speedy eradication."

Israeli Ambassador Michael Comay characterized the Soviet demand as "beneath contempt."

"It is ironical to recall," Mr. Comay told the Herald Tribune, "that in 1947 the Soviet Union supported the establishment of the Jewish state which was born out of the Zionist movement and emerged from the Nazi slaughter of Jews."

A U. S. Mission spokesman said that "we consider it an outrage to equate Zionism with anti-Semitism."

The agreement on the elimination of racial discrimination has been worked on by the Commission on Human Rights since 1962, at the request of the General Assembly. It is now being considered by the Assembly's Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee.

U. S. representative Frances Willis, a former ambassador to Ceylon, Norway, and Switzerland, proposed an amendment that would bind member states "to condemn anti-Semitism" and to take "action appropriate for its speedy eradication."

The Soviet demand that Zionism be included with Nazism and neo-Nazism, as an addition to the U.S. amendment, came as a complete surprise to most committee members.

Some feel the Soviet proposal is a cover for anti-Semitism, reported to be prevalent in the Soviet Union. Others believe the Russians are catering to Arab anti-Zionist views, says the New York Herald Tribune. Some Arab delegations have come out in favor of including Zionism in the agreement on racial discrimination. Fawaz Sharaf, of Jordan, proposed including the words "Fascist, colonialist, tribalist, and Zionist."

The following day Muddathir Abdul Rahim, of the Sudan, said the Arabs are opposed to Zionism in Israel "not because they were anti-Semites, but because Arabs oppose colonialism and imperialism."

Israel's Mrs. Hadassah Ben-Ito, a judge from Tel Aviv, replied that "to include Zionism in a list of racist doctrines would, in effect, equate persecutors with the persecuted."

African and Asian delegations to the United Nations refused to support a U. S.-Brazil proposal calling for "condemnation of anti-Semitism" in a draft agreement for the elimination of racial discrimination.

They also refused to back a Soviet amendment linking Zionism with anti-Semitism, Nazism, and neo-Nazism and calling on member states to implement measures for their eradication as "inhuman ideas and practices."

The Afro-Asian decision was reached at a caucus prior to a meeting of the General Assembly's Third (Social) Committee. The committee is discussing a draft agreement prepared last year by the Commission on Human Rights.

Their decision was announced to the Committee by Moroccan representative Hamila Warzazai, who in a brief "plague on both your houses" speech appealed to both the U. S. and the Soviet Union to withdraw their respective proposal and amendment.

Otherwise, she warned, "The African and Asian group will vote against everything, everything."

Russian diplomat V. M. Chaikvadze said the decision of his delegation "would depend on the attitude of the United States."

The Russian amendment apparently was a technical move designed to defeat any references to anti-Semitism in the agreement.

A number of Asian and African representatives offered reasons for their no-support decision. Saudi Arabian Ambassador Jamil Baroody argued that if the draft convention were to detail "all racial hatred, the list would never be complete", says the New York Herald Tribune. He preferred a general statement rather than a specific one.

Israel Ambassador Michael Comay said the question "for my country is not one of more isms or less isms." He said the issue "is of fundamental importance to my country and my people."

Earlier, before the Special Political Committee, Mr. Comay strenuously opposed an effort by 13 Arab delegations to have the committee hear a statement by Ahmad Shukairy, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, on the question of Palestine refugees.

Mr. Comay said he would not object if Mr. Shukairy were to be heard as a Palestine refugee. But he asked the Arab delegates to make an appropriate procedural proposal so that Mr. Shukairy's appearance would not "imply recognition or status of a political nature."

The Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, representing twenty-one national Jewish groups in the U. S., called on the Soviet Union to reverse the action of its United Nations delegation in "frustrating" adoption of a UN convention condemning anti-Semitism. Dr. Joachim Prinz, chairman of the Conference and president of the American Jewish Congress, sharply criticized "elaborate Soviet maneuvers to bracket Zionism with Nazism, anti-Semitism, and other forms of race hatred."

The Soviet proposal, offered as an amendment to the Draft Convention for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, would have included Zionism among the practices condemned in the statement under consideration in the Third Committee of the UN General Assembly. An earlier amendment, co-sponsored by the United States and Brazil, listed anti-Semitism along with Nazism and other forms of race hatred.

"The falsehood embodied in the Soviet proposal is so blatant," Dr. Prinz declared, "as to make it clear that it could never have been intended seriously but was rather designed simply to eliminate the possibility of any reference to anti-Semitism among the practices outlawed in the Draft Convention.

"Regrettably, that effort has succeeded. As a result of the Soviet maneuver, the General Assembly's Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee has voted to exclude all amendments listing specific forms of hatred, including the one referring to anti-Semitism. We cannot believe that the Soviet people take any comfort from the action of their United Nations delegation in frustrating the worldwide desire to join in a condemnation of anti-Semitism under the auspices of the United Nations.

"But the damage has been done, at least for this session of the General Assembly, and for the time being there will be no reference to anti-Semitism in the Draft Convention. We can only hope that the Soviet government will reconsider and reverse the irresponsible and outrageous action by its UN delegation."

The Jewish organizations' statement added:

"No other government, including those of the Arab states, has ever been so brazen as to impose upon the UN this monstrous invention. Only in the inverted, surrealist world of totalitarianism is such a bracketing possible. The action of the Soviet Union is a libel upon the millions of victims of Nazism for whom the U.S.S.R. has in the past professed compassion and sympathy."

The statement also voiced fear that the Soviet Union's "crude attempt to malign the concept of

Diggers Find Fascinating Ruins Of Ancient City Near Haifa

Archaeologists digging on the shore of the Mediterranean near Haifa have uncovered the ruins of a city that shows consecutive levels of culture ranging from the 10th to the sixth century B.C. Among the finds at the site at Tel Shikmona, were thirteen wine casks found in a cellar estimated to be 2,800 years old.

A label of sorts remained on the casks in the form of two inscribed potsherds on which the Hebrew word "lemelech" (to the king) was discernible, says the New York Times. The archeologists believe these were wine duty labels, a reminder that present-day duties on imported spirits have their roots in antiquity.

The excavations at Tel Shikmona are sponsored by the municipality of Haifa. The site lies on the border between two ancient civilizations — that of the Israelite kingdom and of the Phoenician. It has not yet been established to which of the two it belonged.

Even the Hebrew inscription is not conclusive proof that it was an Israelite city. Dr. Yosef Aigavish, leader of the excavation, said he found in the same locality a few years ago inscriptions in pure Phoenician script dating back to the fourth century B.C.

During the latest 10-week digging season, five geometrically designed mosaic floors of a late period were uncovered.

From the traces of houses found, it is now possible to reconstruct a city plan of the early Persian-period city, clearly showing it was built according to exact town-planning principles. The finds included masses of potherds, jars, votive figurines, and bronze and bone instruments.

Two of the figurines were those of the great goddess of antiquity in this part of the world, the Ashteret. Three scarab seals of Egyptian type were also found.

The archeologists uncovered parts of the old city wall believed to date back to the days of King Solomon. A broken painted vessel, in black and red, of the same period was found.

The site was also inhabited in the late Byzantine period. The archeologists uncovered a Byzan-

★ FEDERATION OF ★ JEWISH COMMUNITY SERVICES

The service rendered to the whole community by the constituent agencies of the Federation without question or care as to origins was specially commended by Robert F. Shaw, deputy commissioner general of EXPO, guest speaker at the annual open house reception of the Corporations of the Jewish Federation Campaign, at the Montefiore Club. Mr. Shaw stressed the common element of interest between EXPO and the Federation as the need to have the confidence of the community in the development of vital community enterprises. The following are excerpts from his address: When EXPO 67 was first proposed, there was real doubt as to whether it would receive the support of Canadians. There were loud voices that said that the Exhibition should not be built on land created for the purpose because Canada is empty. Those who made these speeches overlooked the imagination and just plain good business sense which led to the selection of our most beautiful site. There were those who said that the site could not be ready on time. It was. There were even those who stated forcefully that you could not build on fill although the engineering profession was noticeably absent from the chorus of voices which sang this song of doom. West of Montreal you would hear people say that EXPO was being run by and for a bunch of French Canadians. East of Montreal you would hear that the exhibition was being run by and for a bunch of Anglo-Canadians. And yet, as time passes, we who are working at the Exhibition (and we are neither French nor Anglo-Canadians, just good Canadians), feel a growing surge of support and a greater awareness of the importance of what we are doing. This year the Federation of Jewish Community Services is seeking $1,075,000 to meet the needs of its ten agencies. Somewhere I can hear the voice of doom cry "what a shocking figure". I hear the voice saying: "The Federation is asking more money from year to year. How can I possibly contribute more than I have in the past?; what with the steadily rising cost of everything and the increased demand for more and more services. Why do we have so many appeals? Why can't they increase their efficiency, streamline their operations? It is true that the Federation has to seek more money from year to year. It is equally true that this demand will continue to increase as the cost of living continues to rise and as long as the community demands increased services; and the community will demand increased services as long as the population, and in particular the Jewish population of Canada, continues to increase. During the past 15 years the Jewish population of Canada has increased by more than 42,000 through immigration. 60-65% of this group settled in Montreal. In this same period the Jewish child population in Montreal in the 5 — 15 age bracket has increased by close to 75% and the number of persons of over 65 years of age has increased by 33%. As long as these conditions prevail, it is true that the demands upon you will be increasing. Five or six years ago I visited Israel and while there, picked up a pamphlet in my hotel room in Tel Aviv which informed the reader of the origins of the population of Israel. The last line read, "Israelis who have emigrated from North and South America, Australia, and New Zealand, 5,000". Compare this with the 42,000 Jewish immigrants to Canada in the past 15 years.

INTEREST IN OUR FELLOW HUMAN BEINGS GIVES US UNITY OF PURPOSE AND STRENGTH FOR OUR ADVANCING PROGRAM

By Henry Blatt, of Montreal, general chairman of the 1965 Joint Campaign For Combined Jewish Appeal And United Israel Appeal

The following are excerpts from the statement made at the Corporations' open house reception of the Jewish Community Services of Montreal:

All of us are demonstrating by our presence here today that our interest in our fellow human beings gives us unity of purpose and strength which cannot be diminished by any difference we may have.

Our greatest opportunity to participate in democratic purposes is in our own community and in our local institutions. Each one of the institutions supported by our major federations has become a centre of democracy.

Through these institutions we promote not only liberty from fear and want, not only equality of opportunity, but perhaps more important, fraternity, the highest ideal held in common by our great religious leaders. This ideal of fraternity carries with it a real sense of responsibility, the responsibility of putting our material resources at the disposal of our society so as to serve those less fortunate than ourselves.

"Many of our agencies have been relocated at substantially increased costs to better serve our community's mobile population. New institutions have been built and existing ones have been expanded to meet new and growing needs. Much more remains to be done if we are to serve our community as we should. To mention only a few areas:

Greatly improved services are necessary for the dependent, neglected, emotionally disturbed, and mentally retarded children who turn to our agencies for help. Additional group foster home residences and small residential treatment centres are several projects which need attention.

Our new Maimonides Hospital and Home for the Aged, only recently opened, and which doubled their capacity to accommodate chronically ill, aged people, already has a waiting list of over four hundred who seek services. We must soon make provision for a low cost housing project for the aged if we are to meet the valid needs of this segment of our population.

We have just opened a new Day Centre for Senior Citizens and we know it is too small even before it has had much of an opportunity to get under way.

Our Sheltered Workshop of the Jewish Vocational Service must be expanded if we are to serve the aged, the handicapped, and the emotionally disturbed and mentally retarded adolescents who need this type of service to be able to adjust to life's demands.

Our new Jewish Convalescent Hospital is just being completed and beginning early in 1966 will begin to serve triple the number of their present patients who need short term convalescent care and who, in receiving it, relieve the tremendous pressure for beds at General Hospitals. We have recently expanded the laboratory and treatment facilities at Mount Sinai Hospital to allow them to serve more effectively as a hospital for non-TB chest diseases as well as for the treatment of TB.

Our Herzl Health Centre has been relocated only very recently for improved work in diagnostic services to those who cannot afford private medical checkups to uncover diseases before they become disabling or fatal.

We now must relocate our Neighbourhood House program, whose recreation services to our young people are in quarters bursting at the seams. For economy and efficiency we have recently merged this agency with the YM-YWHA and thus will serve more young people under the best of circumstances. Summer cabin and country camping facilities also need further expansion to give more children who need it the benefit of healthful summer holidays and to keep them away from the temptations of crowded city streets.

WE WANT TRUDEAU FOR MOUNT ROYAL

BECAUSE

- ★ he is the ideal candidate to represent Canadians of all ethnic origins
- ★ he is one of a team of new men who will infuse additional vigor in the ranks of a Liberal government
- ★ he believes in the Liberal government which has instituted vast programs of social assistance and introduced interest-free loans to university students
- ★ he supports the Liberal government which has created unprecedented prosperity and reduced unemployment to the lowest level since 1957
- ★ he will help a Liberal government to establish a comprehensive medical care program
- ★ he will energetically support reform of our electoral laws
- ★ he belongs to the only party which does not engage in double talk but says the same things to all Canadians

AS PRIME MINISTER I am delighted by your decision to enter the federal political life of our country. As leader of the Liberal Party I am proud to have your support. My best wishes and warm personal regards.

Lester B. Pearson

PIERRE ELLIOTT TRUDEAU was chosen official Liberal candidate at the convention. I support that choice. I believe he will make a good contribution in Ottawa if given that privilege by the electors of Mount Royal Constituency.

Alan Mamaughton

PIERRE ELLIOTT TRUDEAU is as bright, broad-minded and honest a person as may be found on the Canadian political scene. Though I fought him for the nomination, I consider him a friend; at his request, I have become a member of his team.

Through him, therefore, I am continuing to work for the strengthening of Canadian unity, the widening and deepening of political democracy, and the emancipation of the people of Canada through educational and social progress — principles in which he and I believe with equal sincerity and determination.

The voters — all the voters — of Mount Royal riding are fortunate to have this intelligence and integrity at their disposal.

LES JUIFS DE MONTREAL

Par Conrad Langlais, en La Patrie

UN EVENTAIL D'OCCUPATIONS

Les Juifs de Montréal se partagent maintenant une beaucoup plus grande variété d'emplois et d'occupations qu'autrefois. Il y en a beaucoup moins que dans le passé qui sont marchands, car les petits commerces tendent à disparaître.

Un bon nombre sont dans les professions libérales, mais on en trouve aussi un nombre grandissant dans l'enseignement, dans le travail de bureau, de gérance et d'administration.

Dans le public, on connaît surtout les avocats et les médecins juifs, mais il y a également nombre de Juifs qui sont ingénieurs, comptables, pharmaciens, professeurs, agents d'assurance, courtiers en immeubles, etc. Depuis la guerre, plusieurs Juifs se sont lancés avec succès dans la construction et dans la spéculation sur les terrains.

Mais les Juifs ne sont pas encore très nombreux dans la fonction publique, dans les grandes entreprises de transport et de communication ou encore dans les occupations essentiellement rurales.

Soit qu'ils ne le désirent pas ou qu'ils n'y parviennent pas facilement, relativement peu de Juifs gagnent leur vie en travaillant pour les Gentils. Et la plupart préfèrent gagner leur vie à Montréal, plutôt que dans les petites villes ou les campagnes du Québec, parce qu'ils préfèrent rester près de leurs institutions juives et de leurs coreligionnaires.

POURQUOI CETTE GRANDE ILLUSION?

Comment se fait-il, alors, qu'on s'imagine aussi facilement que la plupart des Juifs gagnent, en général, beaucoup d'argent?

Premièrement, les Juifs les plus connus sont évidemment ceux qui ont le mieux réussi. Les autres nous sont d'autant plus étrangers que les Juifs ont leurs propres institutions de bienfaisance pour venir en aide à leurs pauvres.

Deuxièmement, peu de Juifs gagnent leur vie à travailler au pic et à la pelle, à bûcher du bois ou à travailler dans les mines, parce qu'ils ont appris à éviter les situations gênantes qui résulteraient parfois des contacts avec des contremaîtres et des camarades non juifs.

Beaucoup de Juifs sont quand même obligés de gagner leur vie assez modestement, soit à leur compte, soit à l'emploi d'autres Juifs.

Nos compatriotes de foi hébraïque semblent, en effet, avoir plus que leur part d'hommes qui gagnent leur vie comme caissiers et teneurs de livres, commis de réception et expédition, solliciteurs et démarcheurs, colporteurs et camelots, vendeurs de journaux, barbiers, blanchisseurs et dégraisseurs, chauffeurs de taxi, boulangers, bouchers et coupeurs de viande, travailleurs du cuir, tailleurs, fourreurs, rembourreurs, ouvriers de la confection de vêtements, bijoutiers, horlogers, etc.

Du côté féminin, la situation est analogue. Chez les Juives qui travaillent hors du foyer, on trouve une assez forte proportion de dames et demoiselles instruites, qui sont dans les professions libérales, dans l'enseignement, dans le travail de bureau et dans les entreprises commerciales, mais il y en a également beaucoup qui travaillent dans les manufactures, surtout dans la confection de vêtements et articles connexes.

Beaucoup de Juifs vivent donc assez pauvrement, même si d'autres se tirent bien d'affaires.

OU VIVENT-ILS?

Les premiers Juifs qui s'établirent à Montréal s'installèrent pour la plupart rue Craig. Puis, au début du siècle, comme le dit l'abbé Norbert Lacoste, dans son livre sur "Les structures sociales de la population du Grand Montréal", les Juifs "se sont glissés entre les Français et les Anglais, le long de la rue St-Laurent, dans les quartiers St-Louis, Laurier et St-Michel".

Outremont fut pendant longtemps la seule ville de banlieue à compter une forte proportion de Juifs, mais de plus en plus nos israélites qui réussissent vont désormais vivre dans diverses villes de l'Ile de Montréal et même de l'Ile Jésus.

Ils sont maintenant en grande majorité à Côte St-Luc, où ils ont élu un maire juif, et ils constituent une partie assez importante de la population dans des villes comme Outremont, Hampstead, St-Laurent, Mont-Royal, Westmount et dans la partie de l'Ile Jésus, maintenant incluse dans la ville de Laval, qui portait précédemment le nom de Chomedey.

Les Juifs pauvres habitent encore les quartiers juifs traditionnels, mais ceux de la classe moyenne se dirigent surtout vers Côte-des-Neiges, Snowdon, Côte St-Luc, St-Laurent et Chomedey, tandis que les Juifs riches préfèrent plutôt vivre à Westmount, Mont-Royal et Hampstead.

AU DERNIER RECENSEMENT

Au recensement de 1961, sur les quelque 105,00 Juifs du Québec, environ 103,000 habitaient Montréal et la banlieue. En chiffres ronds, il y en avait à peu près 200 à Sherbrooke, 50 à Trois-Rivières, presque autant à Noranda, à Joliette et à Granby, 35 à Hull, 25 à Shawinigan, une vingtaine à St-Jérôme et à peu près également ce nombre dans des villes comme St-Jean, Rouyn et Val d'Or.

Le nombre de Juifs, au Canada, n'augmente pas très vite, pas aussi vite que l'ensemble de la population. De 1931 à 1961, la population totale a augmenté de 85.4 p. cent, mais la population juive pendant ce temps n'a monté que de 62.7 p. cent.

L'immigration juive est maintenant moins considérable qu'au début du siècle, et l'accroissement naturel n'est plus très fort chez les Juifs, en partie parce que beaucoup d'entre eux ne sont plus d'âge à élever des enfants, et aussi parce que la limitation des naissances a depuis assez longtemps réduit la grosseur moyenne de leurs familles.

Il y a plus de Juifs en Ontario (109,344) qu'au Québec (104,727), mais il y en a plus à Montréal (102,724) qu'à Toronto (88,648), pour la simple raison que chez nous presque tous les Juifs sont groupés dans la région métropolitaine.

LES JUIFS ET LE BILINGUISME

La plupart des Juifs qui vivent au Canada parlaient surtout le yiddish ou judéo-allemand, vieux dialecte germanique que les Juifs adoptèrent et perfectionnèrent au cours des siècles, et qu'ils écrivaient avec des caractères hébraïques.

Ce fut longtemps la langue maternelle et en même temps la langue de communication, locale et internationale, de plusieurs millions de Juifs européens et américains.

Mais nos Juifs du Canada, comme ceux des Etats-Unis, surtout depuis qu'Hitler a détruit les principales communautés juives d'Europe, adoptent de plus en plus l'anglais.

En 1931, 95.4 p. cent des Juifs du Canada déclaraient le yiddish, et seulement 2.4 p. cent l'anglais, comme langue maternelle.

Mais en 1961, 29.6 p. cent avaient le yiddish et 57.5 p. cent l'anglais comme langue première.

Même à Montréal, les Juifs parlent maintenant surtout l'anglais: c'est encore la principale langue des affaires et ils envoient surtout leurs enfants aux écoles protestantes.

Pour l'ensemble du pays, après les Canadiens français, dont 30.1 p. cent sont bilingues, ce sont les Juifs qui comptent la plus forte proportion (18.5 p. cent) de personnes capables de parler le français et l'anglais.

A remarquer que, de 1931 à 1961, la proportion des bilingues a baissé de 35.7 à 30.1 p. cent chez les Canadiens français, mais a monté de 13.9 à 18.5 p. cent chez les Juifs du Canada.

Beaucoup de Juifs (environ 40 p. cent) vivent au Québec, la seule province bilingue du pays. La plupart d'entre eux ont appris deux langues et parfois davantage lorsqu'ils étaient jeunes, de sorte qu'ils trouvent ensuite plus facile d'apprendre le français.

Comme ils s'intéressent surtout aux affaires, au commerce et aux professions libérales, la connaissance des deux langues officielles peut leur être très utile, surtout au Québec.

Les Juifs gardent leurs enfants aux études le plus longtemps possible, et l'enseignement du français dans les écoles protestantes semble donner de meilleurs résultats chez les enfants juifs que chez les écoliers d'origine britannique.

Il y a, surtout à Montréal, beaucoup de Juifs intellectuels, souvent des réfugiés venus de pays où le français était très en honneur et servait de langue de culture et de communication pour les gens civilisés et de bonne compagnie.

Nous avons aussi au Québec plusieurs milliers de Juifs de langue fran-

J.D.C. LOAN FUNDS FINANCE REHABILITATION

Close to 2,000 loans, with a dollar value of almost $1,500,000, were issued to needy Jews by Joint Distribution Committee-supported loan funds in Europe during the first six months of 1965, it was reported by Charles H. Jordan, JDC Director-General. The total dollar value of loans issued from the end of World War II through the middle of 1965 is over $40,600,000, Mr. Jordan added.

Of the loans issued thus far in 1965, there were 723, worth $429,000, to Jews in France, most of them to newcomers from North Africa. In addition to the loans in Europe, during the same period, over 204 loans, valued at more than $55,000, were made in Morocco and Tunisia; 53 loans worth $91,500 in Australia; and 90 loans worth over $38,000 in Israel. The grand total for the six-month period was 2,305 with a dollar value of $1,653,611.

Mr. Jordan noted that most of the loans went to artisans, professionals, storekeepers, and small manufacturers to help them get started in practice or business once again. Many are refugees with no resources of their own. Others are handicapped and have been unable to obtain employment. For most of them the loans offer their only chance at economic rehabilitation.

The working capital of these loan funds is about $5,000,000, close to half of which was provided by the Joint Distribution Committee and the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany. The balance was contributed by other organizations, local communities, income from cooperatives, etc.

"The average loan is issued for a one-year period, except for housing loans which are for anywhere from two to five years," Mr. Jordan said. "There is a very high rate of repayment, over 99 per cent. As a result, there is a frequent turnover and the loan kassas are able to issue many loans with the same funds."

The Joint Distribution Committee receives funds for rehabilitation programs and other welfare services in 30 countries around the world mainly from the campaigns of the United Jewish Appeal.

çaise, venus de pays où le français est la principale langue enseignée dans les écoles fréquentées par les Juifs, c'est-à-dire d'Afrique du Nord et du Proche et du Moyen-Orient.

Enfin, les relations entre les Juifs et les Canadiens français se sont améliorées et multipliées depuis une vingtaine d'années et il faut se rappeler qu'Israël utilise surtout le français comme langue diplomatique et favorise l'enseignement du français dans ses écoles.

Au recensement de 1961, 3,697 Juifs déclaraient le français comme langue maternelle, 46,935 parlaient le français et l'anglais et 1,120 parlaient le français et ignoraient l'anglais.

ROSENTHAL-ROTH

The marriage of Miss Rise Lynn Roth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman M. Roth, 16 Shallmar Boulevard, to Harlan David Rosenthal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Rosenthal, 22 Strathearn Road, was solemnized at Adath Israel Synagogue, on Tuesday, September 21, at half-past five o'clock, by Rabbi Erwin Schild, assisted by Cantor M. Nixon. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her semi-empire gown was of white, re-embroidered, silk Chantilly lace. It was fashioned with a high, round, scalloped neckline; and elbow-length sleeves; and skirt, slightly A-line, and which finished with a long, pointed, and scalloped train. She had a petalled head-dress, arranged to frame her face; with a long tulle illusion veil; and she carried a spray bouquet of small white orchids. Miss Judith Mosoff, was her cousin's maid of honour. She wore a long, yellow chiffon gown, with a sleeveless, re-embroidered lace bodice; and a bolero jacket, of re-embroidered white lace. A chiffon bow was her headpiece. She carried a drum-shaped carry-all, of tiny yellow carnations and green chiffon bows. Misses Susan Weinstein, Sharon Gold, Zelanie Antflik, and Mrs. Gerald Goldman, were bridesmaids, each wearing a sleeveless, yellow chiffon princess gown. The bodice of each had a bateau neckline. They had bows of chiffon as head-pieces; and they carried flowers, in a carry-all, to match that of the maid of honour. Linda and Janet Rosenthal, sisters of the groom, were junior bridesmaids. Janet wore a long yellow chiffon dress, with a soft skirt, accented at the waist, with a big velvet bow. She had as a head-piece, a band of yellow velvet. Linda wore a long organza dress, of yellow over white, with ruffles and a soft skirt, accented with a yellow taffeta bow. Larry Silverberg was the best man. The ushers were: Carl Fruitman, James Stukey, David Moscoe, Steven Pustil, Ronald Mintz and Ronald Rotenberg. Yellow roses, snapdragons, daisies, and candles in candelabra, were the wedding decorations. The tables had white lace cloths, over yellow. An orchestra played. Two hundred and sixty guests were received. Mrs. Roth, mother of the bride, wore a jewel-toned green velvet gown, softly-draped; with a square neckline, and short sleeves; and she had a headpiece of shirred velvet leaves. Mrs. Rosenthal, mother of the groom, wore an emerald-green satin gown, simply cut, with a skirt shaping to a fan-shape above the hem; high, round neckline, and very short sleeves; with a matching jacket; also a head-piece of small satin leaves. Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Rosenthal spent their wedding trip in Los Angeles, and San Francisco, California; and Las Vegas, Nevada; the bride going away in a cranberry-red tweed suit, which had in it, tones of blue and pink; and a corsage of small white orchids. They reside at 400 Walmer Road. Here for the wedding were: Mrs. Ruby Singer, great-aunt of the bride, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. Janice Rosenfeld, great-aunt of the groom; Ernest Walton, of New York; and uncles and aunts of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Skinner, and children, Randy and Shelly; and Mr. and Mrs. A. OHIO MERCHANT GETS STANDING OVATION come back to Wooster, they drop into the store to see me."

Mr. Freedlander admits that he "appreciates very much what the College is doing for me. When you're an old guy, it's pretty nice. It's good to get an honor like this while you're living, while you can enjoy it."

The Wayne County merchant has been a friend of Dr. Howard F. Lowry, president of the College of Wooster, for many years.

"There's a story about him I like," Freedlander said. "While he was in college he worked for the clothing firm of Blough and Keister, on Liberty Street, where Woolworth's is now. One day a customer entered the store and asked for a blazer. Lowry didn't know what a blazer was so he excused himself, ran across the street to a book store and looked up the word in a dictionary. Then he came back across the street and showed the customer what he wanted!"

A spokesman for the College administration in speaking of Mr. Freedlander, said: "He has been an early and staunch friend of the College through the years as well as a leading citizen of Wooster and Wayne County."

There has been quiet help to any number of students at the college—to a point where the school gave him a testimonial 80th "birthday party" in its chapel. And all sorts of help to individuals with problems—for the most part instances nobody will ever know about except those who were helped and Herman — if Herman even remembers.

Freedlander has been a benefactor of countless projects in this area, especially in regard to contributions for young people. His "kick-off" contribution made the Wooster swimming pool a reality. He has provided playground equipment for dozens of schools and community parks and has created the Freedlander Foundation which provides money for a wide variety of needs.

Many gifts by Freedlander have been made with the firm understanding that the contributions are not to be publicized, while others are given on an "if your community helps too" basis.

Most recent obvious thing is Freedlander Park which he donated to the city, dedicated not too long ago. Then there was a big hand in making possible the municipal swimming pool —on condition, it is said, that there would never be any trace of racial segregation in its use.

He's a lifetime member and leader in Wooster's small Knesseth Israel Jewish Congregation, and also a member of a large Cleveland Reform Temple where members of the Wooster Jewish community send their children for religious instruction.

Mr. Freedlander's son, Harold Freedlander, who has now taken over much of the main responsibility for running the store, takes a full and active part in the business and social life around him in which he is a popular leader.

The owners of the Canadian Jewish Review are cousins of Herman Freedlander, Mrs. Florence Freedlander Cohen being the daughter of his youngest uncle, the late S. A. Freedlander, of Akron; and Pasadena, Cal.

JEWISH CRITICISM

Zionism can only serve to exacerbate the position of Soviet Russia's 3,000,000 Jews."

The following statement was issued in Jerusalem by Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization: "This is absurd." This was the reaction of Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, to the suggestion made by the Russian delegate to the United Nations Social Humanitarian and Cultural Committee, that Zionism should be included, beside anti-Semitism, Nazism, and neo-Nazism in the proposed international convention to eliminate racial discrimination in the world.

"Zionism," said Dr. Goldmann, "is a classic nationalist movement following the pattern of many other nationalist movements, which strove to establish and did indeed establish a State for the Jewish People which suffered for two thousand years from the lack of national freedom. The Zionist Movement never fought against other peoples and their nationalist aspirations. On the contrary, it always supported those aspirations and also nationalist aspirations of the Arab peoples. The Zionist Movement always strove for peaceful relations and cooperation between the State of Israel and the Arab Peoples, and if these did not materialize so far, this is the fault of the Arabs who refuse to accept the existence of the State of Israel as a fact.

"I am astonished, and very sorry," added Dr. Goldmann, "that Soviet Russia which has always shown sympathy to the national aspirations of subjugated peoples, and voted in the United Nations General Assembly for the establishment of the State of Israel, and was the second State, after the United States, which recognized the State of Israel, which is the realization of the Zionist vision, lends its support to the attempt made by the Arabs to compare the Zionist Movement to racialist movements."

Jacques Torczyner, president of the Zionist Organization of America, asserted in New York that the action of the Soviet Union in calling upon the United Nations to condemn Zionism along with anti-Semitism, Nazism and neo-Nazism has "given aid and comfort to anti-Semitic forces in this country and abroad which are making Zionists the main targets of their attacks."

The Zionist leader further declared that "it is below the dignity of a great power like Soviet Russia to stood to such a tactic, which deceives no one, in its endeavors to curry favor with the Arab rulers and to cover up its own anti-Jewish discrimination in the Soviet Union."

Mr. Torczyner's statement was issued in reply to the direct attack which the Soviet Union's representative made upon Zionism at the United Nations in the form of a sub-amendment to an amendment sponsored by the United States and Brazil on the elimination of all forms of racial discrimination. In his statement Jacques Torczyner pointed out to the "alignment in this country between emissaries of Arab states and anti-Semitic and neo-Nazi organizations in a nationwide campaign, through mass media of communication and on the campuses of American universities, directed mainly against Zionism."

Mr. Torczyner further asserted that during World War II Zionists played a leading role in the underground movement against the Nazi invaders, particularly in the uprising in the Warsaw Ghetto and other ghettos. "It is indeed tragic that Zionism, which was instrumental in the rescue and rehabilitation of close to two million survivors of the Nazi holocaust, should be equated with the very evil which was responsible for the murder of six million of the Jewish people."

Mr. Torczyner commended the stand of the United States delegation at the U.N. which voiced its sense of "outrage to equate Zionism with anti-Semitism."

Ohio Merchant Gets Standing Ovation; First Retail Award; Governor's Telegram; Also Recognition By Fellow Citizens

Herman Freedlander, president of Freedlander's Department Store, in Wooster, Ohio, in the wonderful wheat-growing and agricultural area in general that is less than a hundred miles from Cleveland, was triply honored at a dinner for his 68 years of service to the retail business.

Mr. Freedlander, at the age of eighty-six years, was recognized by the Ohio State Council of Retail Merchants, the Governor of Ohio, and, above all, by his fellow citizens, says the Daily Record of Wooster.

The Council of Retail Merchants awarded him a bronze plaque, its first award for distinguished service, in recognition of his "more than sixty-eight years of meritorious service to retailing."

Governor James A. Rhodes, in a telegram delivered to the dinner, saluted Mr. Freedlander for his accomplishments as a leader in the retail business. The governor's telegram, read to an audience of more than forty by Carl Witt, of the retail division of the Wooster Chamber of Commerce, says:

"It is a great honor for me to salute you, Herman, upon your sixty-eight years in business and to review your achievements in the community. May you have many more happy anniversaries."

Fred Neuenschwander, Ohio State director of development, also sent him a congratulatory telegram.

Presentation of the award by George Hammond, executive director of the Ohio Council of Retail Merchants, was followed by a standing ovation.

Mr. Hammond, who was introduced to the audience by Raymond Dix, publisher of the Daily Record, lauded Mr. Freedlander for his contributions to the retail business. He cited his having served as secretary, and later as president, of the Ohio Clothiers and Furnishers Association, predecessor of the Council of Retail Merchants. Mr. Freedlander's record, he said, is lustrous.

Mr. Freedlander in response, gave credit for his success to his father, the late David L. Freedlander, "for laying the original foundation of our business."

The present Freedlander Store, the area's largest department store, and noted for its attentive service to customers, was founded in 1884, known as the "Buffalo One Price Clothing Store," so named because it was founded in a period when everyone was in the habit of bartering.

"Many times people would come in with their families and take three or four hours to select their lot of merchandise and, if it would be $78, the folks would say I'll give you $73 and no more, and out they would go, because my father stuck to the one price policy," he told the audience.

Mr. Freedlander, who was conferred an honorary doctor's degree in humanities last year by the College of Wooster, recalled that he was given the command of the store when he was still a young man in his teens in 1897 after his father became ill and died shortly after.

The present Freedlander Store was started on South Market Street, where the liquor store is located. Later it moved to the corner of the Public Square, where Wooster Hotel Store is. In time it acquired sites of two adjacent stores and subsequently its present buildings.

"One thing I appreciated more than anything else," he remarked, "was that we have been successful in our community and still respected. I don't know if anyone can ask for anything more. I have been very fortunate and able to smell my roses while I am living. I have had a wonderful life and a wonderful family and I could not wish for anything more."

The Freedlander Store, in its eighty-eighth year of business, is recognized throughout the United States as a leader in retail business volume, ranking second in its class only to a New York state firm which sells heavy appliances and farm equipment.

Freedlander himself is on the job at the West Liberty Street store every day and nothing delights him more than when a customer asks especially for him as a clerk. That's the kind of confidence and friendship no man can buy," he says.

Mr. Freedlander is obviously in love with his work — after more than seventy years. And he's the picture of a man enjoying himself. At eighty-six he looks like a young seventy.

"I'm very fortunate at my age to have good health — no aches or pains. I'm one of the very lucky people. We think we get un-useful as we get older but we don't."

He admitted that some people seem to enjoy retiring and doing nothing. But there's no such plan in Herman Freedlander's mind. "My boss," he said emphatically and with a twinkle in his eye, "is not retiring me. I enjoy what I'm doing — very much. Am I going to keep it up? And how!"

But if you want to talk to Freedlander during the noon hour, when many of the clerks are out to lunch, you're likely to do a lot of waiting, says the Akron Beacon Journal, which is also less than a hundred miles from Cleveland. You stand by while he digs through the stock for just the sort of shirt Mrs. Jones wants for her boy Jimmy—and meanwhile checks on how are Jimmy and the other kids, and how is Mr. Jones coming along since his operation.

And so forth until he's sure no customer is waiting unattended. Then he'll stop and talk on non-business things—maybe squire you out to his stately old Cadillac, navigate it carefully and competently out to the big, comfortable old house with its beautiful grounds where he lives alone, and talk to you over lunch.

He's a good storyteller—often with nostalgic anecdotes in which he is poking fun at himself. He reports the time the shoplifter stopped him cold. A clerk had seen her shift a pair of panties from a counter inside her umbrella that hot July day. Herman challenged her. "Oh, they're mine," she said airily. "It was so hot I took them off." He couldn't think of anything to do but let her go.

Herman Freedlander was born in Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 24, 1879, oldest of the seven children of David L. Freedlander, who originated in Wirballen, Lithuania. He was then a pack peddler—though about to "graduate", and brought the growing family to Wooster in 1884 to start his store. Herman had finished two years of high school when his father died. The creditors put it to him that if anybody was going to keep the store a going concern it was up to Herman now.

Mr. Freedlander sacrificed his own formal education to educate his brothers and sisters. The decision paved the way for their achievements in sociology, medicine, industry, and business.

A much younger brother, Dr. S. O. Freedlander, of Cleveland, was chief surgeon at Mount Sinai Hospital at his recent retirement. Another, Dr. Ben Freedlander, also became a surgeon in San Francisco, Cal., and devoted thirty-five years of his career to cancer research until he himself died of cancer. Another, A. L. Freedlander, has been president, and chairman of the board, of the Dayton Rubber Company (now Dayco Corp.). Still another, Isadore, has been a partner with Herman in the store for over sixty years. A sister, Dr. Etta Freedlander, of Cleveland, a former teacher, was proclaimed "woman of the year" in the Jewish community.

Freedlander's and the College of Wooster more or less grew up together. The department store had its beginnings some eighteen years after the College on the hill opened its doors.

And although Herman Freedlander never received an undergraduate degree at Wooster, or at any other college, when he walked across the platform to receive an honorary Doctor of Humanities degree, a good share of the audience knew him and he may have known even more of the faculty, students, and townspeople assembled for the 96th commencement.

Mr. Freedlander has built a business which has a high standing all over Wayne County and even beyond. Long ago "Freedlander's" became a familiar name for college students in their four year stay in Wooster.

"We've seen many of the graduates through the years," this storekeeper says. "Some of them have been friends of mine for many years. When they

Rabbi Plaut Calls New R.C. Version of Schema "A Serious Retrogression"

The Roman Catholic Church has fallen grievously short of redeeming itself from a great sin by not condemning anti-Semitism, Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut said in a sermon at Holy Blossom Temple, a Reform Jewish synagogue on Bathurst Street, in Toronto, reports the Toronto Globe and Mail. Rabbi Plaut was critical of the section of the schema related to the Jews that was promulgated by Pope Paul VI. He was also critical of the Pope.

A copy of the declaration relating to the Jews was placed in each pew of the Temple and in a prepared text Rabbi Plaut referred to it a number of times.

On the controversial question of whether the Jews murdered Christ and, if so, what theological meaning it has, Rabbi Plaut charged the promulgated version of the document is weaker than the earlier, much publicized draft.

The revised draft says: "Although the Jewish authorities, and those who followed their lead pressed for the death of Christ, nevertheless what happened to Christ in His Passion cannot be attributed to all Jews without distinction, then alive, nor to Jews today."

Seen by itself, Rabbi Plaut said, the statement sounds reasonable, but the earlier version is much stronger than the final draft. It said:

"All that happened to Christ in His Passion cannot be attributed to the whole Jewish people of that time, much less to the Jews of today."

Rabbi Plaut said the new version represents a compromise which muddies the clear-cut vision of the previous expression. "It is therefore, in my opinion, a serious retrogression."

Rabbi Plaut said the previous draft said the Jews must not be considered a 'deicide' race. "The present draft omits the term and thereby expresses its unwillingness to part with the ancient prejudice completely. Despite all theological arguments this omission represents a further retrogression."

Rabbi Plaut said the previous draft said the Church "deplores, indeed condemns," anti-Semitism. "The leaving out of the words, 'indeed condemns,' marks in my opinion a moral failure on the part of the Church Council," he said. "The Church has condemned many things from artificial birth control to communism, it does not merely deplore these manifestations of human behavior.

"Yet after two thousand years of bloodshed, it could only 'deplore' what has happened, but not 'condemn' it. In this case the truth was not at issue, only the naked consideration of secular pressures. In this case theology was not at issue, only politics was," he said.

Rabbi Plaut said he can understand the elimination of the word "decide" and the hesitation of speaking clearly and unmistakably about the guilt of the Jews in the murder of Christ, but he cannot understand why the Church could not condemn anti-Semitism.

"No amount of argument, no personal feeling of friendship for those who are part of the Council and must have deeply regretted this retrogression, will keep me from saying that the Church has grievously fallen short of redeeming itself from a great sin. But God will be its judge, not I," he said.

Rabbi Plaut said he believes if Pope John had been alive he would not have permitted the deterioration of the original intent into theological casuistry or political power considerations.

"And I also do not believe that had he celebrated the mass at Yankee Stadium as did his successor before 90,000 people and before millions who followed the mass on radio and television, I do not believe that John XXIII would have chosen as his selection for scriptural reading the text from John . . ."

That scripture reading: "On the evening of that day, where the disciples were for fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood among them and said to them: Peace be with you."

Rabbi Plaut said the weaknesses of the document are apparent and saddden him as they have saddened many other Christians and Jews. "Yet its total text represents a great advance which I greet with profound satisfaction."

The rabbi said the Roman Catholic Church will, in a sense, be on trial to effect what it has finally pronounced after much soul searching and agony.

More good jobs, more money to spend

There are more Canadians at work today than ever before. There are fewer people out of work than at any time since 1957. 500,000 Canadians are in new jobs created in the past two years. Income taxes were reduced by ten percent. Income from wages has never been higher. There are more people holding down more good jobs, earning more money than at anytime in Canada's history. The country is moving again and Canada needs a strong Liberal government to keep it moving.

More opportunity for our young people

Extended family allowances and student loans are helping our children get the education they need. Federal grants for vocational schools are ensuring a square deal for all our young people. Young Canadians are learning new skills in federally-supported retraining programs across the country. The Liberal program for scholarships will make sure that able young Canadians are no longer shut off from university because they can't afford it.

More security for everyone

In 1963 the Liberal government raised the Old Age Pension to $75. a month at age 70. Under this year's legislation, the pension is to be provided earlier. By 1970, it will be paid to everyone at age 65. Under next year's Liberal program, the Canada Assistance Plan will provide whatever support above $75. is needed by people already retired. For those now working, the Canada Pension Plan—universal, contributory, fully portable, geared to future wages—gives real meaning to the word security. For 1967, the Liberal government has set the stage for Medicare. A strong Liberal government will secure the Canadian dream: a debt-free future for the sick, a worry-free future for the old, in a proud and growing Canada.
